 Roger

To Richard, I'd about what to this about you starting baseball next year, I don't think you will make bench-warmer. Have a good summer, and all that.
 Jerry

Daily, Dickie,
 Well, see you
 next year on V.B.B.
 Have a good time this summer and lay off 20 ~~games~~ a day.
 Good luck until next year.

Paul P. the

Rich

To Bud you couldn't have made Orlan prefect but I guess that it was not in the cards. Anyway
 I have gotten to know you better it's ok. I that is something
 I've got you down
 Looking forward to seeing you next year. Jim Cluibon

Rich,
 Stay pure.

Bob Sabatella

P.S. I don't like baseball.

I won't see you on V. baseball

Kidding

Richard O Hope you have a good summer
see ya next year

I am Hepburn (alias) Hepburn
you might make V.B.B. next year
I hope to see ya there,

Dick - after a good year at BASEBALL hope you have a good one at B is "G" starting at short - Have a great summer and ~~watch~~ Don't get burnt!

ON A TREE FALLEN ACROSS THE ROAD

The tree the tempest with a crash of wood
Throws down in front of us is not to bar
Our passage to our journey's end for good,
But just to ask us who we think we are Insisting always on our own way so.

She likes to halt us in our runner tracks,
And make us get down in a foot of snow
Debating what to do without an axe.

And yet she knows obstruction is in vain:
We will not be put off the final goal
We have it hidden in us to attain,
Not though we have to seize earth by the pole

And, tired of aimless circling in one place,
Steer straight off after something into space.

ADMINISTRATION

Our chief want in life is somebody who shall make us do what we can.

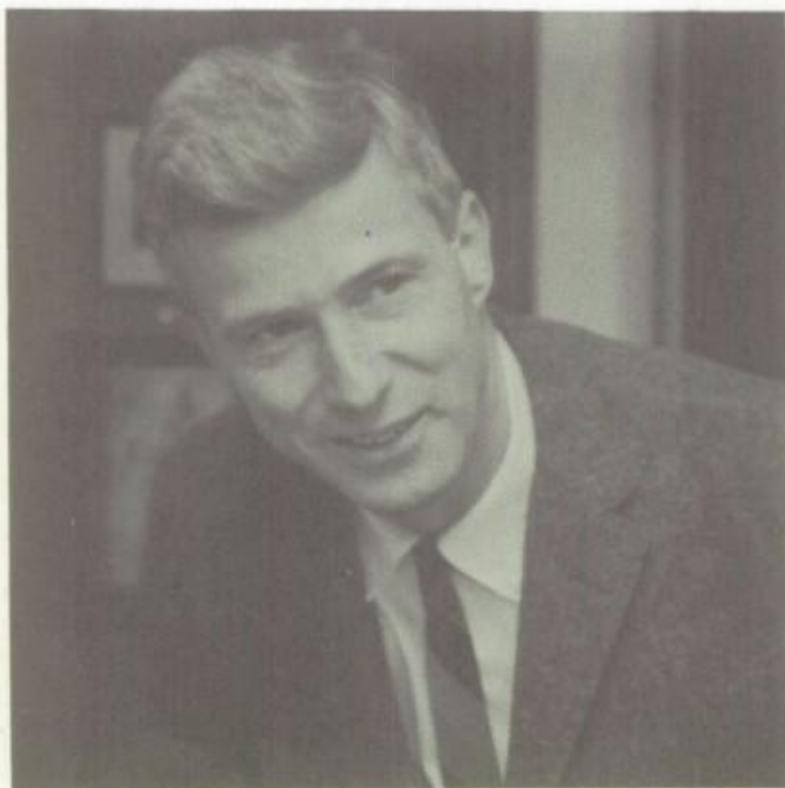

Richard McFeely

John Talbot: "Now I don't want to do this, but . . ."

Adeline Turner

Adelbert Mason

James Achterberg: "This guy's scores aren't very good, but he'd be great on the football team."

Frances Saurman: "Certainly we'd be glad to change your schedule again!"

Harold Passmore: "Well, as soon as the doors come, we can open the library."

Grace Day: "Do you realize you're overdrawn again?"

James Tempest: "Have you really considered the small Mid-western colleges?"

Dorothy Huddleston's dean games: Dinky toy races on the blotter.

Vicko Melada: "Yes, I'm ready for a coffee break now, Dorothy."

Susan Porter's dean games: "This little piggy went to market . . ."

Elizabeth Ogborn

Watson Briggs: "Yes, the mail is out."

Erna Meder

Jennie Mason: "We regret to inform you that your son and/or daughter . . ."

Kathleen Fethon: "Well, Mr. Tempest's very busy filling out your college recommendations."

ARTS

It is the treating of the commonplace with the feeling of the sublime that gives to art its true power.

Palmer Sharpless: "Well, you could always make a canoe like Herbie over there."

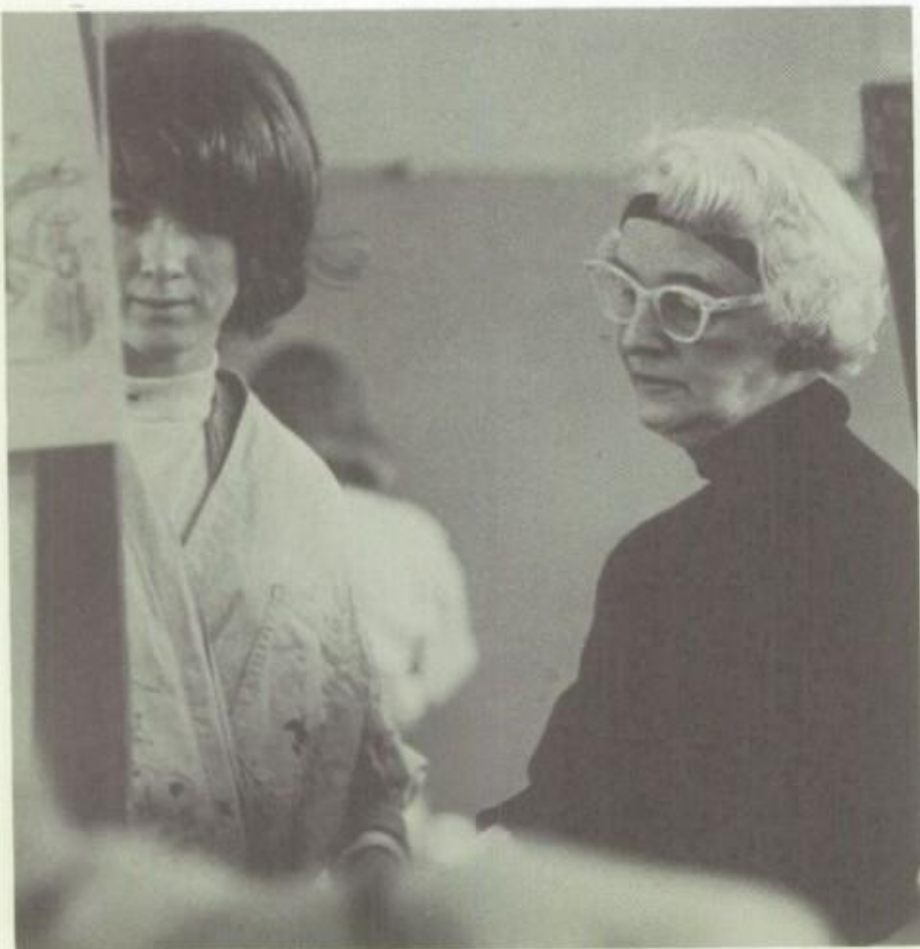

Kenneth Burton

Richard Averre: "Hold it!"

Ruth Pleasonton: "Pat, someday you'll see the light."

Elizabeth Powell: "That's a weird effect, but it's fun."

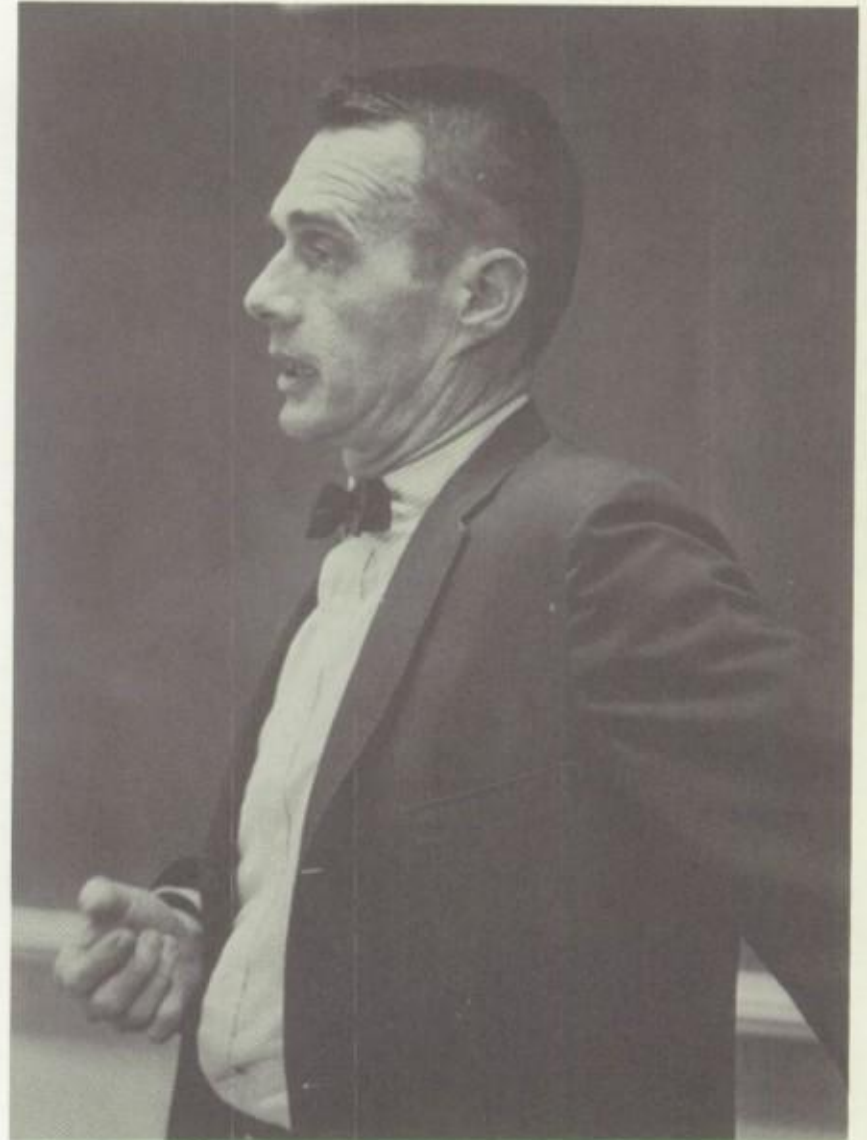

HISTORY

Dirk Dunlap: "It's the greatest thing that's come down the pike in fifteen years."

It is a lesson which all history teaches wise men—to put trust in ideas, and not in circumstances.

Clark Moore: "Get this down; it's going to be a profound statement."

Kay Edstene: "Baloney."

Robert Waters: "Let me say this about that."

Walter Johnson: "Involve yourself."

James Shakespeare

Kenneth Keskinen: "Questions? Comments?"

ENGLISH

He gave man speech, and speech created thought, which is the measure of the universe.

Constance Sigler: "Lovely."

David Miller: "We'll wrap this one up today."

Edward Ayres: "Hang on a second!"

Ernestine Robinson

Arthur Brinton: "There are five minutes left. Fine! We have just enough time for a quiz."

Coach Weimar lives sports: the pain of training, the disappointment of losing, and the joys of all those wins!

ATHLETICS

Assured of worthiness, we do not dread competitors; we rather give them hail.

Anne LeDuc: "Think!"

Irene Lehmann: "Can't I play?"

Jane Eyre: "You swim like walruses."

Robert Geissinger: "I don't know what color it is."

Lars Jansson: "Get rid of your gum."

Dorothy Detwiler: "You people always do things the hard way."

MATHEMATICS

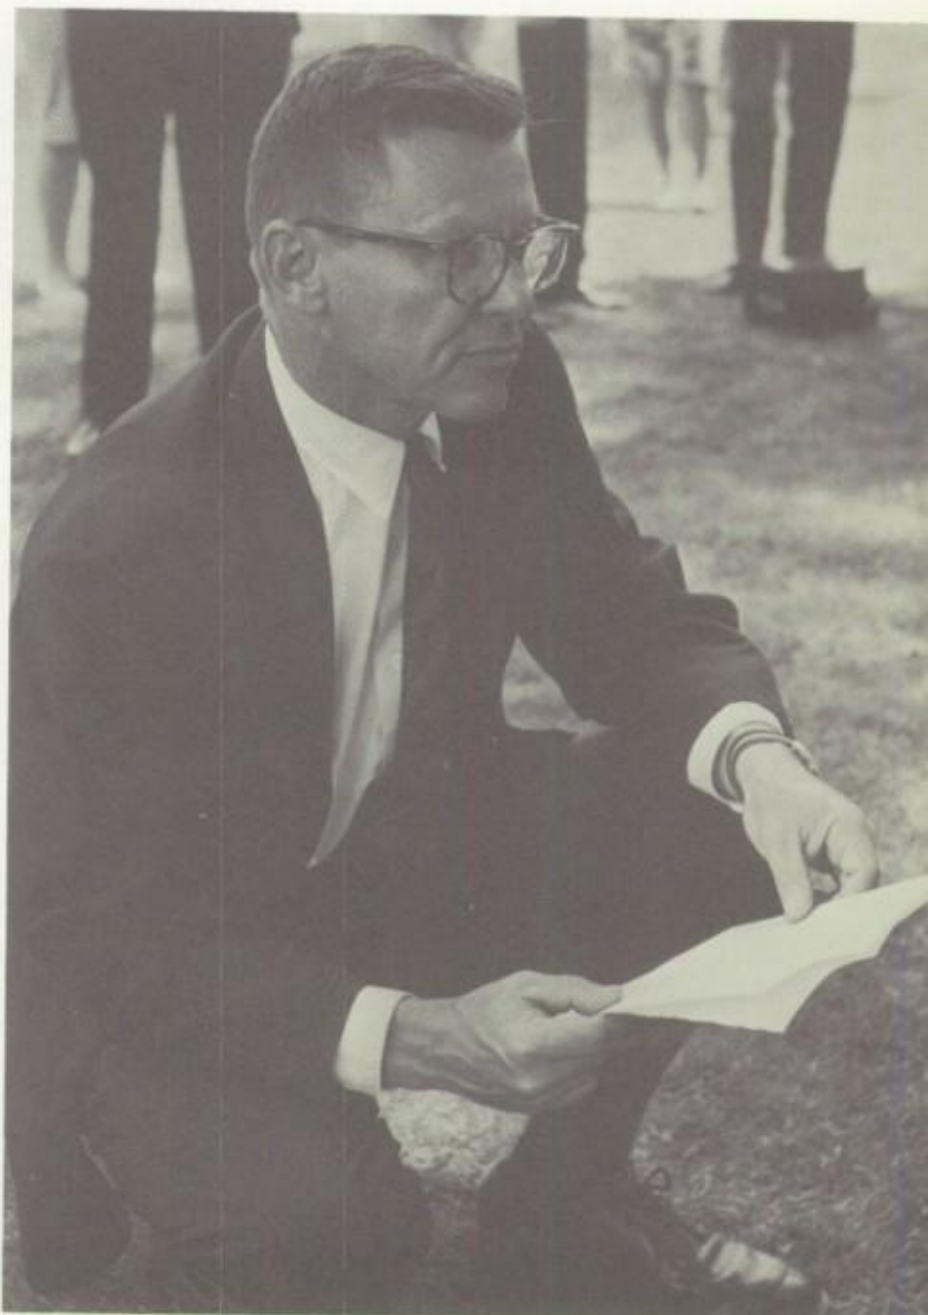

Mathematics possesses not only truth, but supreme beauty.

Walter Evans: "I don't like the way the book explains that one. Here's my way; it's easier."

Grant Fraser: "You just romp through the manipulations."

Walter Daub: "But it's so easy."

SCIENCE

Science carries us into zones of speculation, where there is no habitable city for the mind of man.

Dale Miller: "Horrors, child."

John Streetz: "You miserable creatures."

William Craighead: "Today I would like to share with you . . ."

William Burton: "Sometimes you students can figure out physics faster than I can."

Phyllis Fetterman: "I'm off to the faculty lounge for a cup of tea."

Robert Hammer: "Always trust in your moral and spiritual leader."

RELIGION

Religious feeling is as much a verity as any other part of human consciousness.

William Cleveland: "As soon as the Walton Center's completed, everything will be different."

Kenneth Schroeder

Eugenie Vickery: "Oh, just read it all; it won't be much."

LANGUAGES

Language is the memory of the human race. It is as a nerve of life running through all the ages, connecting them into one common, prolonged and advancing existence.

Elliott Berkman

Katherine Webb: "That animal just doesn't exist."

Julius Laramore: "The class may pass out."

To my friend Dick - Good wishes for good things
Sincerely
Julius B. Laramore

Marion Heacock: "I haven't a clue."

Eleanore Hoyle: "Speak up, dearie."

Elizabeth Neureiter

Elizabeth Metzl: "Eh?"

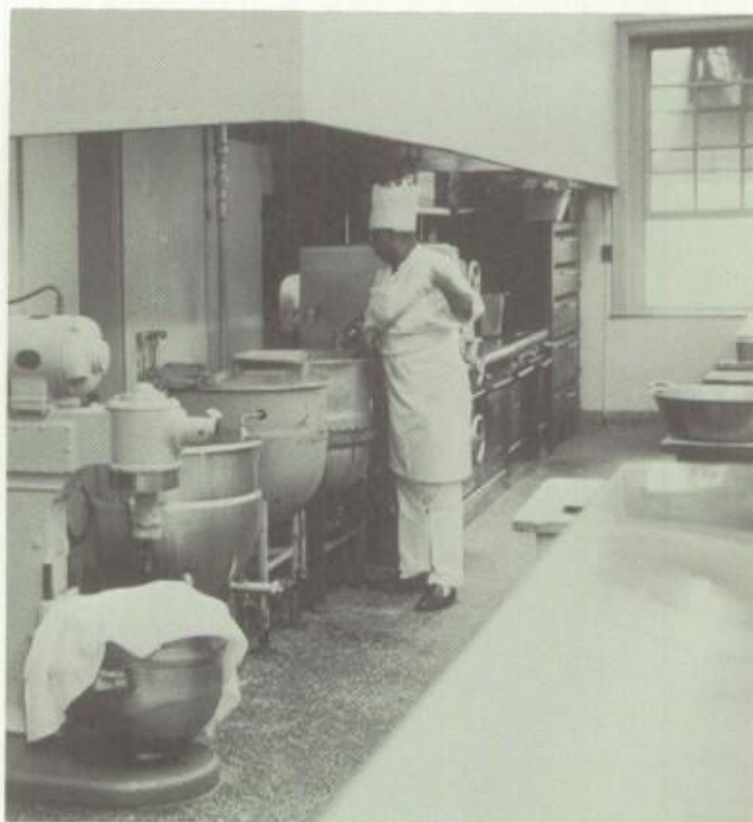

BEHIND THE SCENES

Pearle Morrell

Edna Mebs

John Robinson:
"Double, double, toil
and trouble; Fire burn,
and cauldron bubble."

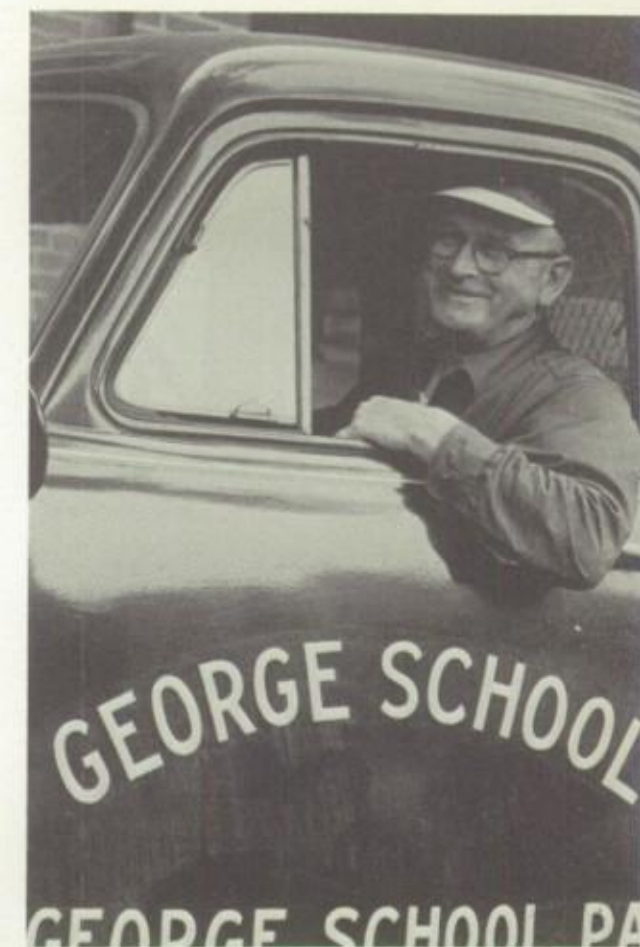

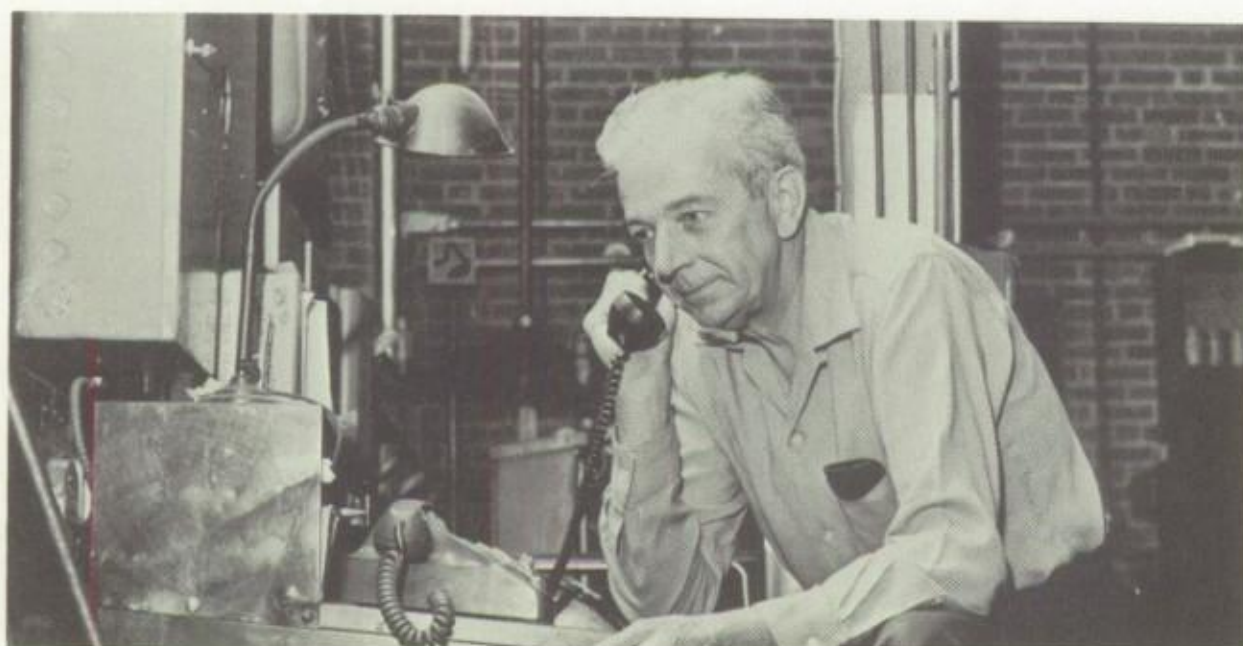

Ruth Conover

Junius Cox and Booker Dingle: "We certainly do consume a lot of jello around here."

Helen Martindell

Mike Heverin: "Uh-oh, another Campus Clean-up Day."

Leon Baker: "Hello, Service Shop. What? Yes, we'll be right up."

"Polly" Brinton: "Oh, Gary, this won't hurt!"

SENIORS

We have become seniors. For some it has been a laborious process; for others it has been a long, uninterrupted picnic; and for some it has been a variable experience. Finally we have been entrusted with the duties appropriate to seniors: turning off our light switches, being table heads, proctoring study halls, perfecting dormitories, and filling out endless forms aimed at a higher education. Through the fall we fought for privileges and free-time, trying to identify ourselves as seniors, and to set a pattern and spirit to live by the rest of the year. All these things alternately frustrated and gratified us, and eventually gave us senioritis.

We find ourselves more contemplative, and less aware of the details of George School life: a clean room, the neatness of dress, the advertisements for the dances. We need more vacations, and extracurricular entertainment. The future looms too large, too close, too frightening. Strangely, the time loses itself in the papers, tests, and conversations, and captures us in depressions. The fun is not enough; the work is too much. There is not enough time before Graduation to relax under a favorite tree, discover unfamiliar personalities, pursue new ideas. It gets too cold outside. The classes drag. Then nothing interests us; relationships, actions, and petty rules seem to have been outgrown. We're restricted. The pressure restrains enthusiasm and drains energy: sports are too time-consuming, or the work is.

The underclassmen are ubiquitous, looking to us for an example to follow, or the answer to a question. We don't know all the answers; we set the little less than perfect example. We need their faith though, as evidence of our maturity.

Our year. We want it to be the best. We go to games because we want school spirit, and winning seasons. We want dances to be fun, and courses to be stimulating. We want people to remember us and say, "There'll never be another class like the Class of '65!"

Then spring transmutes the trees, the lawns, and our spirits. We move outdoors, and stay there except for seemingly shorter classes, and three daily trips to the dining room, when we'd rather be picnicking. Pressure lets off; worries are resolved; we are united. Minds wander; flies annoy. We have to get out—but it's harder; rules seem stricter.

We fear Graduation, life outside, losing our stature as seniors, and leaving familiar surroundings. For the first time talking with these people we'll never see again, and socializing seem more important than studying, or attending committee meetings. We are accepted at college at last; we let up during the last eight academic weeks. Suddenly we are much more aware of the people, and of the past, and more eager to participate in as much of school life as we can.

We have felt these things together. Separate experiences and activities with different groups merge into one large memory: that of George School through our years, moods and seasons.

Defense seems weak. I'm getting angrier—Screaming. They're doing their best. I can't help it, stamping my mud-clotted shoes, Rib pads are sticking to my sides. Sweat trickles in my eyes. They are standing around watching themselves getting beaten. They are slow-moving idiots. If I could only get on the field I would smash through and grind the ball-carrier into the mud every play.

I will smash through the tacklers. Muscles are tensing because defense has held. My turn. Give me the ball every play. I will smash through all tacklers. Please, don't throw a pass. Don't carry it around the end. Just let me run it. Give me the ball. Smash through all tacklers. Please.

Working for the student government subjects one to a great range of feeling. At times, maybe during a government assembly or a weekly meeting, crowded with idea-filled students, one feels that he is stirring a great and important mass movement—that he is really doing something for other students that matters to them. It's more than a sense of power, rather a feeling of freedom. At low points, one feels wasted, almost used. Detail-encumbered meetings addle the brain; one wishes to be alone, or laughing, or even studying. Which feeling wins out depends on the kind of year, the kind of students. This year most of us felt rather free.

The first time we met our tutees, we eyed each other, excited, uncertain. Now the tutoring sessions have become a routine. Every Tuesday and Thursday we find a few sitting quietly at the long tables; two or three are downstairs in the playroom, playing pingpong with their younger brothers and sisters, and in a corner or under a desk we may find ours, watching us with shining eyes, waiting to jump out at us.

We were surprised at first that they didn't understand the theories that we tried to explain. Later we learned to explain addition with concrete examples—such as torn pieces of paper—and to teach a halting reader to sound out a word step by step, by covering all but a few letters. We have gradually become accustomed to our tutees' struggles with the multiplication tables, their constant showing off for us, and their loud confidence when they understand the point of a story, and we have come to appreciate them as much as they appreciate us.

DRAMATICS — JUNIOR PLAY

Pat O'Regan, Caliban.

Sally Bodine, Miranda; Doug Ewbank, Prospero; Pat O'Regan, Caliban.

Dress rehearsal, then the two final performances arrived. In full costume and caked with make-up each actor tried again to find his part as he took a final glance at his script. Everything had to run smoothly now or no one would believe that we had worked so hard. The curtain finally opened and those backstage smiled nervously; at the end of each scene the slow feeling of relief and accomplishment increased.

A black and white photograph of a forest. The image is taken from a low angle, looking up at several tall, slender tree trunks that rise vertically towards the top of the frame. The trunks are dark and textured, with some showing signs of bark peeling or roughness. The upper portion of the image is filled with a dense canopy of leaves, which appear as a bright, dappled pattern of light and shadow. Sunlight filters through the foliage, creating a soft, ethereal glow that permeates the scene. The overall composition emphasizes the height and verticality of the trees, creating a sense of looking up into a vast, sun-dappled sky.

. . . the yearbooks finally came, Jim,
then graduation day.

June 5, 1965. Whew! Through the picnics, meetings, exams, fatigue, this is what was coming. Now it's not fifteen, fourteen, thirteen . . . four, three, two days away. The Party is over. Today—today. Do not hold me to this planet of verbs and math today! See those birds? They fly! If we hurry we will catch Apollo, and with his chariot circle the sun forever, suspended in this moment of spring. From up there the world is a glass bubble for us to gaze into. Hurry! Can you come? I wouldn't want to leave you.

Eugenie Vickery snapped Ian
(Would you care to join Opus '66?)
while Bert Mason gave us the countdown.
Ellen Davis read I Corinthians 13 beautifully;
then Colin Bell, Executive Secretary of the AFSC, spoke.

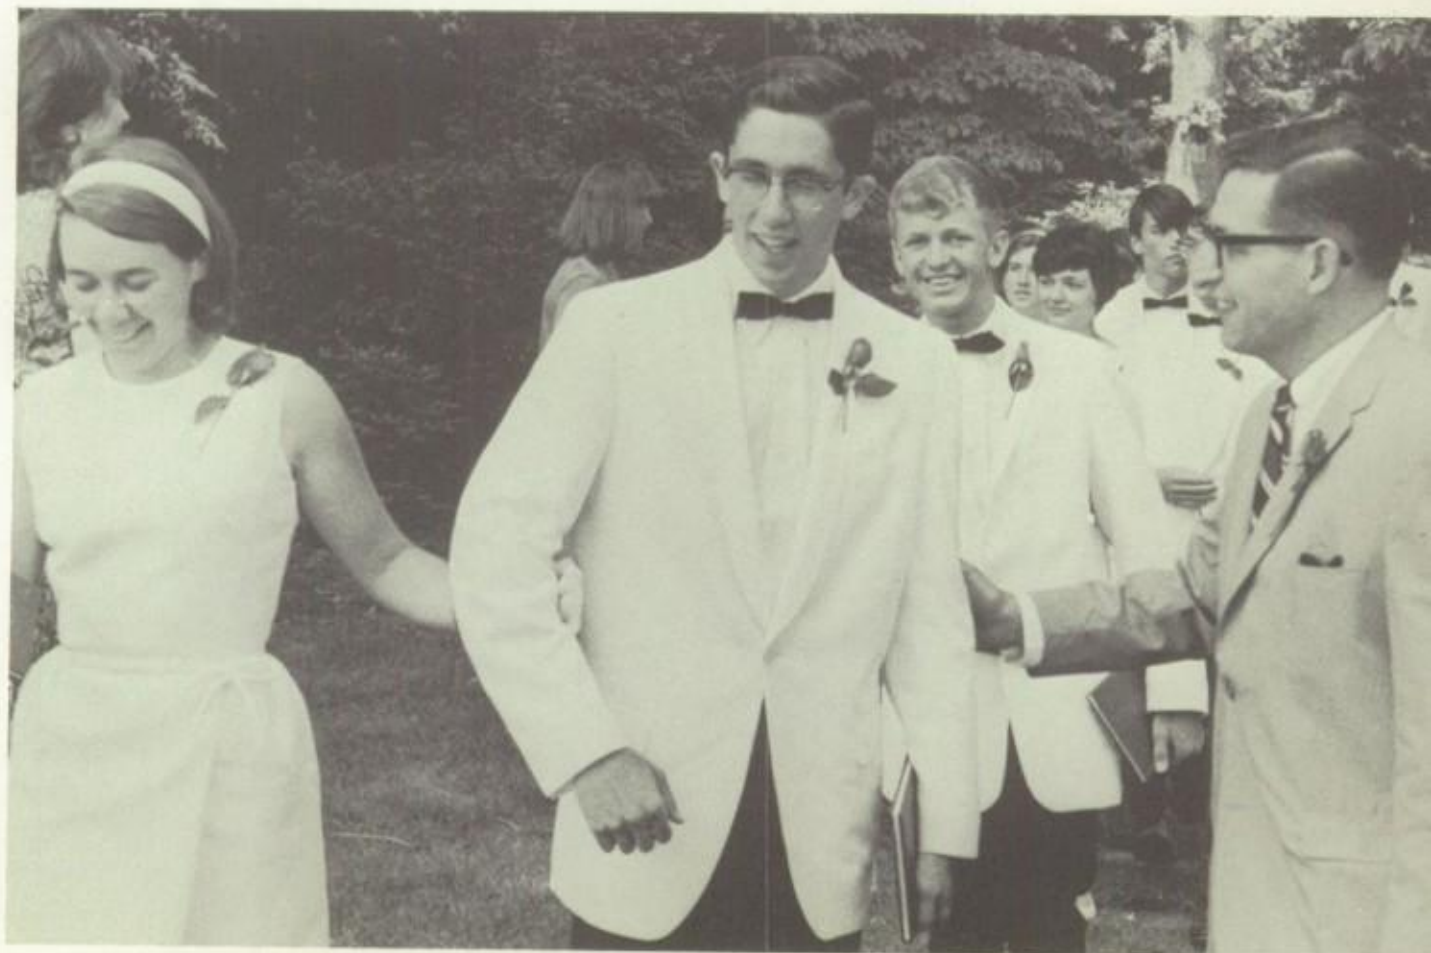

Mr. Dick gave us our diplomas.

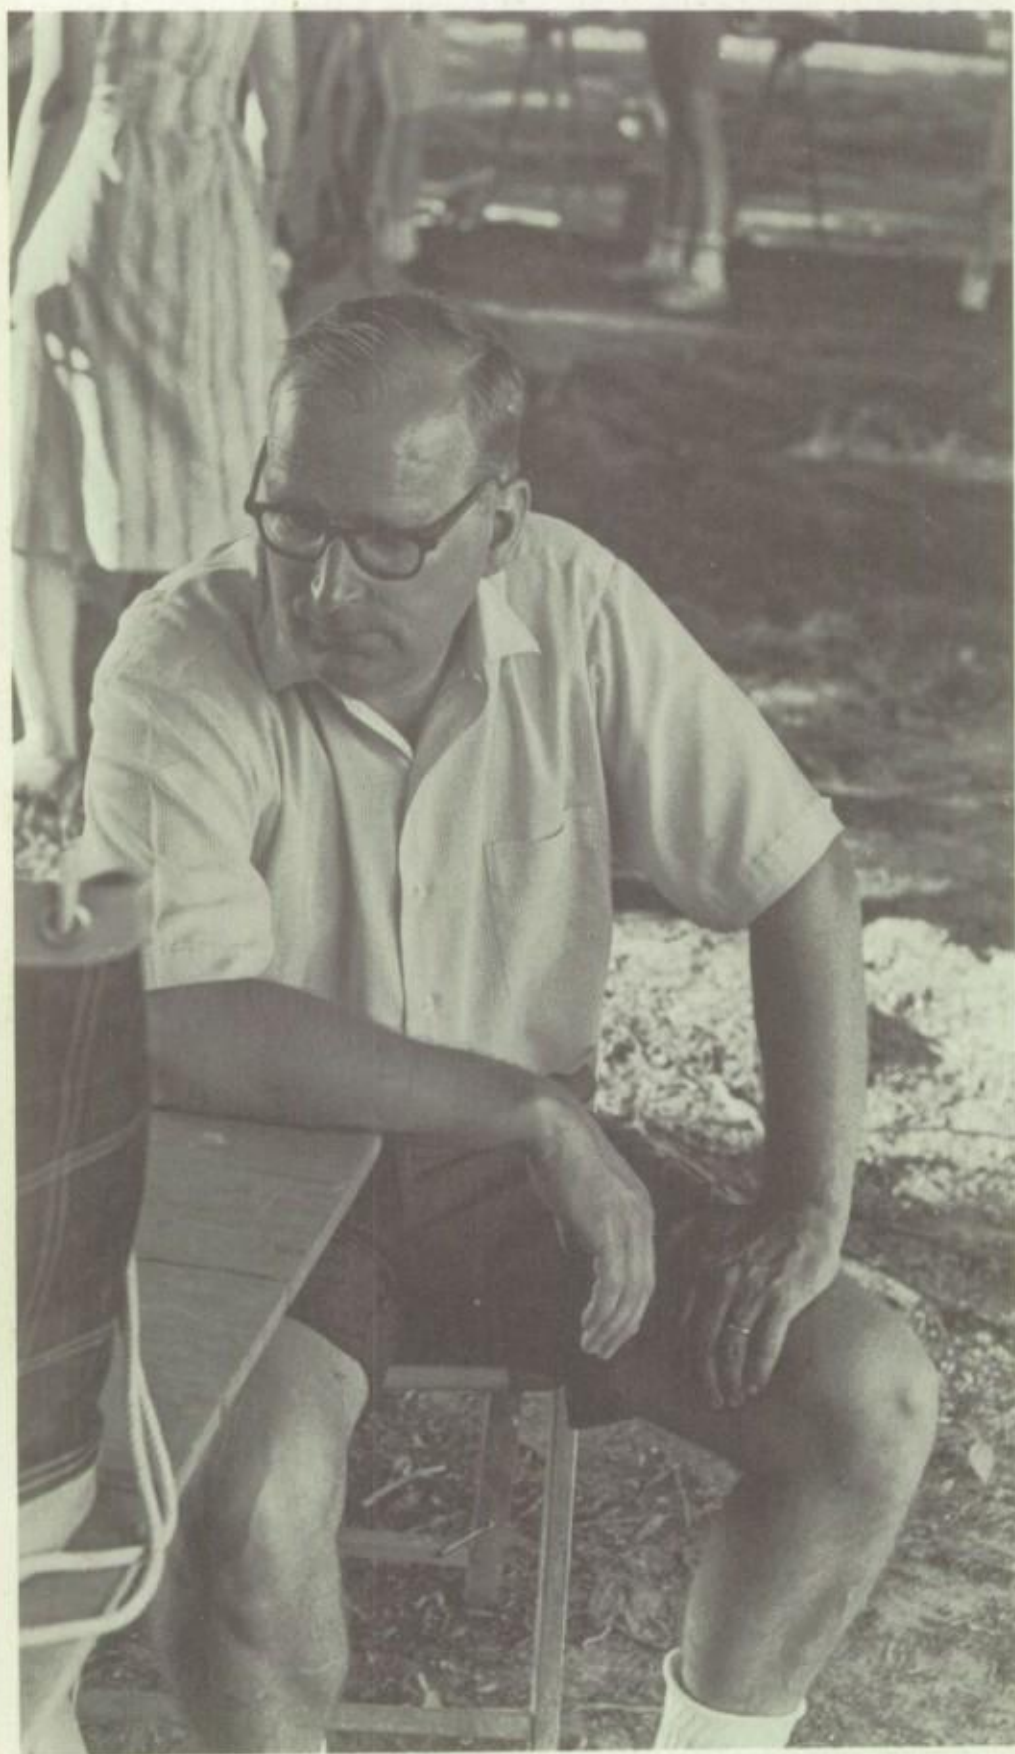

Robin, Pete, Meg, and Bill got theirs.
Diane, Wendy, and Jeff (you're next) watched us.

We made it! (Little help there fella?)

"After you've gone, there's no denyin' . . ."

Dick,
Good luck in everything you do!
Down with the Phillies!
Fight for everything and anything you believe in and believe in everything you fight for - That's the only important thing in life.

P.S. Down with the Phillies!

Your Friend,
Bill Wolf

Rick,
I guess you had an interesting experience, living with the Mole. Good luck in soccer in the fall!
Jon W,

Dick,
Good luck
at S.S. and all other things that come down your path.
Bill
P.S. The Phillies are great and I know that your judgements are good about them
